Heartwarming tale of romance and flightVon Helen HancoxThis was a heartwarming story following the lives of two people that love flying and whose lives interweave at various points in their history. Morgan Glennon grew up in a small Oklahoma village and at a young age began a passion with flying. Morgan is illegitimate and his mother won't tell him the identity of his father and this has caused him much heartache as he grows up and decides to become a professional pilot, eventually being part of the war against Japan in World War II. However he has bumped into Georgia Welles, a widow who is also a WASP (a female pilot that carries out deliveries and other tasks) and finds himself interested in her. However Georgia is quite remote from him and he doesn't understand why. Half of the chapters are written from Georgia's point of view and we understand that her illegitimacy and her difficult mother have very much affected her belief in love. Georgia pours her energy and talent into flying and yet she can't forget about Morgan. When Morgan is missing in action Georgia realises her feelings for him, and when Morgan believes he is going to die he reconsiders his life and what is important. The shock of discovering the identity of his father followed by his forced landing makes him reconsider some of his ideas about life and God and Georgia. This book has a firm Christian thread running through its pages with both hero and heroine behaving morally and with integrity. The author doesn't lay the spiritual side on too thick, it's a gentle leavening of the story which helps the characters to understand a little more of their position in the world and to each other. The detail of flying in America in the 1930s and 40s is fascinating, particularly with regard to Georgia's role as a WASP. This is a gentle and touching love story, a sequel to 'Fields of Gold', the story of Morgan's mother, but it worked excellent as a standalone novel. It's a book to savour and enjoy. Der Beginn des ersten Weltkrieges zeichnet sich ab und es wird die Entwicklung zweier junger Menschen beschrieben, die die Liebe zum Fliegen gemeinsam haben. Die Behandlung, die in den USA den Frauen zuteil wurde, die erst bei höchstem Einsatz den Nachschub der Armee sicherten und danach eiskalt abserviert und wieder an den Herd geschickt wurden, liee sich heute keiner mehr gefallen. Wieder ein Buch, das fesselt.

Kurzbeschreibung Marie Bostwick delivers a captivating novel of soul mates discovering each other as the country faces its greatest challenge. . . Morgan Glennon's destiny points straight up into Oklahoma's clear, blue sky. It's been that way since he was four years old, imagining the famous flier father he's never met. Morgan leaves college to enlist as a Navy pilot, and his whole world suddenly changes when America goes to war. Watching his friends fall in battle, robs Morgan of the joy he always felt in the air. It will take one very unusual woman to help him get it back. . . Georgia Jean Carter learned early never to rely on a man for anything but trouble. Airplanes are different: they take a girl places most boyfriends can't. Remarkably, the war makes it possible for Georgia to do her part as a pilot. Flying with the WASPs brings a special sense of belonging--yet there's something missing that Georgia doesn't recognize until a brief encounter sets her dreaming about a young flyboy she barely knows. . . Praise for Marie Bostwick and Fields of Gold "A touching story." --Patricia Gaffney "Captivating and hauntingly beautiful. . . a true gem." --Romantic Times, 4 stars "A gripping, heartwarming story." --Dorothy Garlock on Fields of Gold From Publishers Weekly This solid WWII-era romance from Bostwick (Fields of Gold) puts two self-reliant pilots, both of whom nurse childhoods hurts, on the same flight path. Oklahoma-born Morgan Glennon never met his father, a barnstormer who swept his mother off her feet before disappearing back into the sky; after Pearl Harbor, Morgan's dreams of flying take him straight from his freshman year at the University of Oklahoma into enlistment. Georgia Carter, 18, from the cracker part of Florida, far from the beach and the daughter of an erratic mother, takes a job at a diner near a Waukegan, Ill., airport, trying to get airtime to quell her flying jones (not easy as a woman). These two lives are very differently affected by WWII, and as the narrative moves back and forth between them, readers will wait for fate to bring them together. Bostwick fills out their destinies satisfyingly and delivers tempting brushes with intimacy at all the right moments before the end-of-war denouement. (Nov.) Pressestimmen Marie Bostwicks ON WINGS OF THE MORNING is a gripping, evocative read that will set your heart to soaring into the turbulent skies of WWII. Watch Maries star rise. This is one very talented writer. New York Times bestselling author Debbie Macomber This solid WWII era romance from Bostwick puts two self-reliant pilots, both of whom nurse childhood hurts, on the same flight path . . . Bostwick fills out their destinies satisfyingly and delivers tempting brushes with intimacy at all the right moments before the end-of-war denouement. Publishers Weekly . . . Bostwick does an excellent job of telling the story of the WASP. Since this novel doesn't need to be read as a sequel, it is recommended for most fiction collections. Library Journal Bostwick's sequel to her debut novel, Fields of Gold, is a one-of-a-kind find, the sort of book that completely transports you to another place in time. This wonderful story has the complete package: romance, drama and a fast-paced, seamless plotline. RT BOOKreviews, 4-star Top Pick This story was a fascinating concept with a beautiful ending and lovely writing. ArmchairInterviews.com Marie Bostwick has penned a powerful novel about the early days of the last World War. From page one this reviewer was mesmerized by Ms. Bostwicks narrative and the magnificent way she quilts together her fiction with fact. Morgan and June and their families are solid and real people you would like to know personally. This is a beautiful tale of love and loss, hope and faith. Betty Cox, ReadertoReader.com [ON WINGS OF THE MORNING] is an uplifting and spirit-nurturing read. Fresh Fiction Ms. Bostwicks language is poetic and beautiful in its own right. She twists words to create images that stay with the reader long after the book is finished. Her characters make one believe in soulmates and the idea that things happen for a reason. Her belief in love is awe-inspiring and although, she states that the story is fictional, one can imagine that this type of life altering love affair happens to people around the world. Romance DesignsMarie Bostwick weaves a mesmerizing tale that is most absorbing. Her story takes the reader on a flight to a marvelous journey not forgotten. The Romance StudioThis incredible rare read brings a happy tear to the eye and a special sensation to the heart. Coffee Time RomanceON WINGS OF THE MORNING took me back to a simpler time in American history, but one in which people loved as much, still made mistakes, but had a common purpose. So much of it reflected what those interviewed for Ken Burns latest film, The War said about the era. Jayne, DearAuthor.comON WINGS OF THE MORNING is a beautiful story about love and loss. Bookloons.comON WINGS OF THE MORNING still ranks as one of the most beautiful and most romantic stories I have read in a long time. Unlike many writers, Bostwick does not rely on mental lusting to convince readers that her story is a romance, but instead dives deeply into her characters' hearts to tell a much more emotional story. This quality, together with her obvious delight in her historical setting, make for an unforgettable story. Lynn Spencer, All About RomanceThis is a gentle and touching love story, a sequel to Fields of Gold, the story of Morgan's mother, but it works excellent as a standalone novel. It's a book to savor and enjoy. CurledUp.com
