Von Janet Chapman : The Dangerous Protector (Puffin Harbor) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The Dangerous Protector (Puffin Harbor):

KundenrezensionenHilfreichste Kundenrezensionen0 von 0 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. Warm-hearted romantic suspense, part 2 of a seriesVon S. FischerWillow Foster and Duncan Ross had one passionate night

18 months ago. But when Duncan made it clear that he wants more than a fling, Willow ended their relationship before it really began. She is afraid of love after several painful losses. But Duncan doesn't give up and his chance to win Willow finally comes when Rachel helps some local lobster fishers. There's some serious (and illegal) pollution near an island near Willow's hometown and her attempts to find the criminals soon become a threat to her life. Enter Duncan, who wants to protect the woman he loves and finally wants to make her realise that their love is worth taking risks...As Janet Chapman's other novels, this book has warmth, humour, likeable characters, and the romance and suspense are both great. I enjoyed this book and would recommend it. It can be read on its own, but it's more fun to have read the first in the series, 'The seductive impostor' first. The Seductive Impostor

Kurzbeschreibung Janet Chapman returns to the breathtaking Maine coast in Seductive Impostor the second novel featuring two passionate sisters . . . and the men who have what it takes to love them. Willow Foster is committed to protecting Maine's precious coastline. She's equally committed to avoiding her one-time fling, Duncan Ross, the rugged Scotsman who got her hometown believing she's the love of his life. But when Willow goes home to uncover the mystery behind a worrisome lobster catch, she learns that pub owner Duncan holds some mysteries of his own . . . and that taking a chance with her heart might open her life up to passion beyond her wildest dreams. From Publishers Weekly Coastal Maine serves as the appealing backdrop for this charming but clichéd novel of romantic suspense from Chapman (The Seductive Impostor). When a lobsterman alerts state Assistant Attorney General Willow Foster to the presence of contaminants in Puffin Harbor, she begins a secret investigation. She's unofficially assisted by bar owner and former salvager Duncan Ross, whose offers of both marriage and passion she's been resisting since a one-night stand 18 months earlier. As the two explore both the corporate paper trail and the local seascape, Duncan reveals that he's actually a Scottish lord, while Willow is forced to grapple with her fear of commitment. The story's use of old-fashioned romantic conventions often seems silly in this modern context. Corporate polluters call their victims "Miss," while Duncan's sister's Internet lover arrives from New Zealand carrying family heirlooms to ask for permission to court. Chapman's mimicry of Duncan's brogue is also unfortunate, making him sound more like Popeye ("Can ya climb with yar splint?") than an aristocratic adventurer. This novel works best when it focuses on the timeless bonds between friends and family, community and place. Agent, Grace Morgan Literary Agency.
