dumped by his fianc, he succumbed to self-pity and became a recluse in his grand mansion. His only contact with the outside world is his friend, and now assistant, Jake. Trying to kick Damien out of his self-pity mode, Jake schedules a long overdue vacation to visit his parents. This means Damien has to hire someone to take care of his personal and financial needs. In walks Lisa Andrews, with her scent of violet overwhelming Damine's senses. Is he ready to take back his life and live again? Being legally blind myself, I understood the premise behind this story. Your other senses do kick in to compensate: smell, sound and touch. What I didn't understand was the need for the wheelchair. He's blind, not crippled or an invalid. That part didn't ring true for me at all. But, the wheelchair added more drama to the story. The plot is pretty straight forward, no surprises. Even with the return of the ex, I knew how the story was going to end. The best part of the story was the narration. Ju does a good job with the intimate scenes between Damien and Lisa. Pretty steamy. Unfortunately, I thought the characters were too one dimensional, and each character sounded like the other, they even used the same phrases. The dialogue was very stilted, and it felt more like a draft instead of a polished manuscript. It couldve used some editing also. I found it a so-so story and give it 3 feathers. 0 von 0 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. I must admit that I cannot think of one emotion that wasnt used in this book Von Al-Khemet Book Club I must admit that I cannot think of one emotion that wasnt used in this book. The plot line was riveting and sucks the reader in from the first scene, the book is very well written and I enjoyed its varying dynamics. Al-Khemet Book Club JUL 2015

Kurzbeschreibung After losing his sight in a terrible accident, only to learn that the woman he was planning to marry did not love him enough to accept him, Damien Falconer was devastated. Struggling to cope with his disability, he isolated himself from society, allowing no one to get close to him, but his personal assistant, Jake. Upon learning Jake was soon to leave his employ and return to Scotland, Damien was forced to advertise for his replacement. Among the applicants who answered his ad was Lisa Andrews, a registered nurse from Connecticut. But Damien was adamant that he would not be replacing Jake with a woman. His argument was, he did not feel comfortable with a woman doing the things that Jake did for him, but one whiff of Lisas unique scent and Damien found himself fighting a blistering physical attraction the likes of which hed never known before. Should he hire her or should he ignore what his other senses were screaming at him, about this woman. Damien rustled with the question for several days, but in the end, he caved. And so began a hunger for a woman he couldnt see...could only recognize by her unique scent...yet wanted like hed never wanted anything before.
